Deer Kill in State for 13 Days of Season Is 54,000

Hunters Bag 23,000 Does And Bucks In Six Upper Tier Counties Alone; See Possibility Of A National Record Being Set; Refuges Protect Herds.

Pennsylvania hunters, approaching the close of the 1931 deer season, are setting what is probably a national record for a thirteen-day kill, the game commission believes, but are not likely to threaten the state herd with extinction.

With two days remaining on which hunting is legal, data available at the commission offices indicate the estimated kill of 54,000 will be attained. Of this total, close to 40,000 will be does, the state-wide returns tending to show the bagging of three antlerless deer for every buck.

Bag in 6 Counties
The expected total for Clearfield, Center, Clinton, Elk, Lycoming and Pike counties this year has been estimated at 23,300, as compared with the 1930 state aggregate of 26,094.

"With our game refuge system it would be an utter impossibility to shoot out our deer herd," Chairman Ross Lefler declared. "If all deer outside of our refuges were killed in any single season we should still have more for restocking purposes within refuges than were to be found in the whole district a few years ago."

With the close of the 1931 deer season, it was said, has been made in the vicinity of farm lands and high-ways. The main herd, deep in the forests and mountains, is not being reduced. The bulk of the kill represents the far-flung divisions of the herd which, the commission believes, were forced to extend their range mainly because of the large recent increases in the deer population.

Refuges Untouched

The territory in which the thirty-five regular and seventy-five auxiliary game refuges are located still fosters the majority of the herd.

Statistics for the present leading counties, it was pointed out at the commission, indicate that the open season for does has not shown a basis for the charges that herd would be wiped out or greatly diminished, it was said. In 1927 the kill in the six counties totaled 6,936. During the seasons of 1928-30 inclusive, with does classified as legal game in 1928 and again in 1930 a total of 29,919 deer of both sexes was killed.

This year, despite the increased toll of the last three seasons, the probable kill has been estimated at 23,300.

FALL LABOR DAY PROVES FATAL FOR SOPHOMORE

Wellsville Student Dies Friday After Long Illness From Injury.

SPECIALISTS CALLED IN CASE

An injury suffered in a fall from a hammock on Labor day was the indirect cause of the death of Augustus Christian Hetrick, 18-year-old Gettysburg college sophomore, at the University of Maryland hospital, Baltimore, Friday.

He was the only child of Dr. and Mrs. H. Bruce Hetrick, of Wellsville, York county.

Young Hetrick, while camping along the Conewago creek Labor day, fell headfirst from a hammock, and remained in an unconscious condition for some time. He apparently recovered, however, and when he returned to Gettysburg college, in September to take up his sophomore studies, he seemed in his normal health.

As the semester advanced, the youth complained more and more of headaches and failing eyesight. His condition grew so serious that on November 7 he was taken to his home. Failing to respond to treatment, he was admitted to the University of Maryland hospital, Baltimore, on November 20, and his death occurred there at 10:30 o'clock Friday morning.

Specialists Called In

Repeated examinations failed to establish the cause of the young man's strange malady. His sight failed and he suffered excruciating pain in the head. When medical treatment brought no results, operations were resorted to in an effort to locate the trouble. Three eminent specialists of Baltimore were called in upon the case. Dr. Charles Bagley, brain specialist, of Johns Hopkins hospital; Dr. Spear, neurologist, and Dr. Anderson, eye specialist.

Staff physicians of the University of Maryland hospital also studied the case. Despite every effort made to save the young man's life, his condition steadily became worse. The cause of death was given as a tumor imbedded in the depths of the brain.

Young Hetrick was well-liked by every one and was especially popular among his classmates at Gettysburg college, where he was a member of the sophomore class. He held membership in Phi Kappa Psi fraternity and was manager of the glee club. He matriculated to Gettysburg from the Wellsville high school, where he graduated in 1929, being salutatorian of his class.

Besides his parents, he is survived by his grandmother, Mrs. A. C. Hetrick, 93, of Wellsville. Funeral services Monday, with services at the old Hetrick homestead at 2 o'clock, the Rev. F. D. Sutton, pastor of the Rossville Lutheran church, where the youth was a member, officiating. Dr. Henry W. A. Hanson, president of Gettysburg college, and members of the dead youth's class and fraternity will attend the services. Interment will be in the cemetery at the Warrington Friends' meeting house.

Breezes Sweep Over Middle West Plains

Chicago, Dec. 12 (AP)—Balmey breezes swept many sections of the middle west today as its farmers slithered about muddy fields and motorists traveled slushy roads.

But while farmers battled with almost impassable secondary roads made so by the melting snows, Colorado reported heavy cattle losses from the cold. In the Sierra mountains of California, there was more than four feet of snow, with more on the way.

REACH UNDERSTANDING Washington, Dec. 12 (AP)—An informal understanding was reached today between the administration and senate leaders that foreign governments would not be considered at fault if their war debt payments due next Tuesday are not paid pending formal ratification of the one year moratorium suspending these payments.

KANE DECLARES HE LOVED HIS WIFE, AT TRIAL

Says Quarrel With Brother-in-law Over Motorcycle Cause Of Ill Feeling.

Hampton, Dec. 12 (AP)—The jury trying Professor Elisha Kent Kane for the murder of his wife, was instructed that it must return one of two verdicts today, acquittal or first degree murder. The murder verdict would carry a penalty of death.

Hampton, Va., Dec. 12 (AP)—With visible emotion, Elisha Kent Kane Friday described the drowning of his wife, answered charges of culpability with assertions of heroic efforts to save her, and shouted denials to the judge of allegations of profanity made by his wife's relatives.

Tears came to his eyes as Kane testified that he loved his wife and told of swimming with her to shore in a frantic effort to save her after she had gone down twice in the waters of Chesapeake bay.

He leaped from the stand to rush to the judge's bench to shout denials of using profanity or that he had ever called his dog by the name of a Deity. He later apologized to the court for his outburst, stating that his life for the past three months had been extremely trying.

Professor Kane occupied the witness stand for nearly three hours. During cross examination of the witness, the court allowed the introduction of two letters exchanged between Kane and his wife during last summer, but overruled a motion for the introduction of the "Betty" Dahl letters, contended by the state to establish a motive for the alleged murder.

Kane gazed at the jury as he described his life with Mrs. Kane, admitted his inviting a Mrs. Dahl to Port Bragg dances and related that W. H. (Hap) Graham, his brother-in-law, hated him as a result of a quarrel over a motorcycle.

The defense rested late Friday afternoon. Kane, in describing details of the drowning, said his wife shouted to him to watch and then slipped from some rocks into the water at Grandview lighthouse.

"I shouted to her to lie on her back," Kane testified. "I saw her go down, twice, I think, before I got to her, and found her submerged. "I dived, not a long dive like the prosecution would infer, from a rock or stump, and got hold of her body. She clutched me convulsively.

"I got a hold on her and started to shore. It seemed I had the whole weight of the ocean on me. I may have been mistaken how far she had floated. It seemed fifty feet to me.

Kept Her Face Above Water "It was a terrible weight in my tired condition. I kept her face above water. When I got near the shore she suddenly went limp."

Kane said he screamed until he was hoarse and squeezed her in an effort to get the water out of her lungs.

"None of the boatmen responded," the witness continued, referring to a number of boatmen who had testified that they had heard screams and had seen a man bearing a body from the water. "I tried to get her into the car, but I couldn't do it. I then ran or staggered to the car to back it."

The defendant said he drove to town as fast as the car could possibly take me.

"I loved the woman. I went like the devil."

Professor Kane stated that no one at the hospital seemed to know their business. "They were all running about and I was frantic. I had told the women at Grandview to call the hospital. They were such ninnyes that I could not make them understand."

Kane said he had never at any time taken a life saving course.

The defendant followed his brother, Dr. Thomas L. Kane, to the witness stand. Doctor Kane testified concerning the dead woman's heart trouble. Prior to Doctor Kane's testimony, Dr. Evan O'Neill Kane, father of the defendant, was cross-examined. The elder Kane refused to say he received a harsh letter from his son over a refusal to come to Hampton to make an examination of the professor's wife.

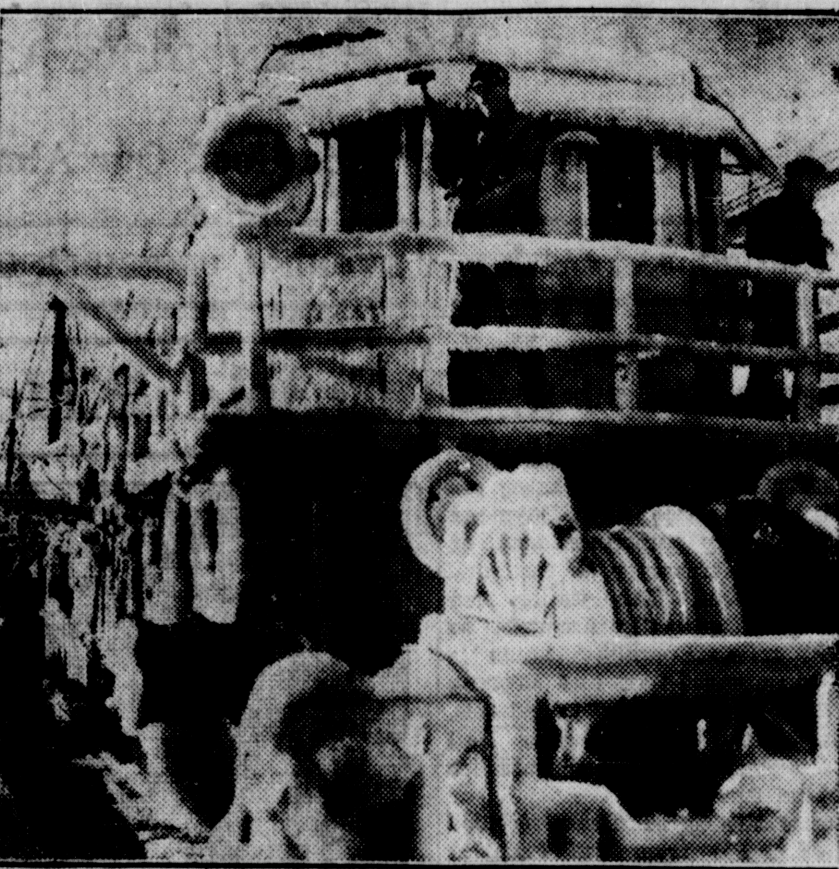

BUTTON IS CLUE TO SLIT-MACHINE TRIF

Chambersburg—A button, alleged to have been torn off the coat of Kenneth W. Keltner, 20, of Martin avenue, near Franklin street, this place, while he was moving a heavy slot machine at the Franklin street fire house several weeks ago is responsible for his arrest and confinement to the Franklin county jail on charges of looting the machine.

A button off Keltner's coat fell into the machine, police said, while he was lugging it in the early morning hours from the fire house to the rear of the adjoining yard of the Franklin street school.

Keltner, because of his actions the morning following the robbery, was suspected. When it was discovered by Harry Nyman, driver of the Franklin fire apparatus, that one of the buttons was missing from Keltner's coat, the man was arrested Thursday. Chief of Police H. S. Byers said he admitted the theft.

"STONEWALL" IS RIFLE CLUB TO STILL PUZZLE OPEN SEASON

Alfred Hugenberg Is Seen As Future Head Of Germany.

By J. A. Boumann Berlin (AP)—Alfred Hugenberg, "Stonewall Hugenberg" to his admirers, is one of the puzzles of present day German politics.

Relegated to the background when the election in September, 1930, reduced his die-hard nationalist representation in the reichstag from 78 to 41, he has been again in the forefront in the last few weeks. At the recent rally of nazis and steel helmets at Bad Harzburg, he was right up in the spotlight with Adolph Hitler.

There were some there who saw in Hugenberg the future titular head of Germany if the Hitlerites ever succeed in establishing their dictatorship.

Called "Stonewall"

Dr. Hugenberg earned the "stone-wall" sobriquet by his stiff-necked attitude on whatever he conceives to be the right course. He is a organizer of unusual parts, having demonstrated that before he changed his seat on the board of the Krupp works at Essen for a place in the reichstag.

On the platform he is bristling in both speech and appearance, his rigid, white pompadour and stiff mustache adding to the effect. His short, crisp sentences are flung out in the voice of a drill sergeant.

Much was expected of his leadership of the German nationalist party when he took office in 1928. He controlled newspapers, advertising and film agencies, which carried his name into all corners of the Reich. But personal magnetism was lacking.

Is Outspoken

His nationalism is uncompromising. He was an outspoken annexationist in world war days and advocated fighting to the bitter end in 1918. He opposed the Versailles treaty, the Dawes plan, the Young plan and every other measure which, in his view, was framed to "enslave the German people."

Hugenberg's reduced following joined the 107 Hitlerites who marched out of the reichstag last February and again this fall. Nationalists and fascists are one in their desire to overthrow the Bruening government and destroy social democracy. They differ only as to ways and means.

Health Bureau Handles Big Mail

A single bureau in the state department of health handled 44,000 pieces of mail in October it became known today. The bureau of vital statistics received 11,268 letters for the month, and in turn sent out over 30,000 first class pieces of correspondence. The mailings of the vital statistics bulletin totalled 2,500. The fees received for searches and certified copies of certificates approximated $3,200.

This presents a vivid picture of the activities of this bureau for a single month. The health department is organized with 12 bureaus functioning daily to carry on the work, not only in Harrisburg, but in every section of the state.

Tokio, Dec. 12 (AP)—Japanese military authorities have decided to submit to the new Japanese cabinet as soon as it is formed a proposal to send 15,000 more troops into Manchuria. The proposal was outlined just too late to be placed before the cabinet which resigned yesterday.

Backward Looker

Athletic Head Favors Old Grid Scoring Method.

Springfield, Mo. (AP)—A. W. Briggs, veteran athletic director at Southwestern state teachers' college, would end the point-after-touchdown controversy by going back to something old instead of trying something new.

He favors the system in vogue 10 years or more ago, when the ball was brought out into the field 15 yards from the point where the touchdown was scored.

If the scoring team considered this would make the kicking angle too difficult, it had the option of a "kick-out" from the point of the score, with 10 mme scattered over the field to attempt the catch.

The ball was then put in play for the attempted goal kick at the point where the receiver caught it.

Briggs believes that with such a system "the point was well worth working for."

New York city sportsmen who go in for deep sea fishing have been asked to give a portion of their catch to the Salvation Army for distribution among needy families.

CONVICTS SLAIN AFTER ESCAPE

Warden Wounded As He Tries To Escape From Six Prisoners.

Leavenworth, Kan., Dec. 12 (AP)—Three escaped convicts, trapped in a farm house, were killed and three others were recaptured Friday after the sextet had kidnapped and wounded Warden Thomas B. White, of the Leavenworth federal penitentiary.

James Galvin, assistant deputy warden; I. W. Mooney, prison guard, and an unidentified possaman were wounded and one of the captured trio also was shot during the chase. All are expected to recover.

Dead And Recaptured The dead convicts were: Grover C. Durrill, George Curtis, Will Green.

Those recaptured were: Stanley Brown, Tom Underwood, Charles Berta, wounded.

After a check-up Friday night prison authorities expressed the belief that a seventh prisoner, Earl Thayer, who had been sent to the penitentiary from Oklahoma City for mail robbery with the convicts slain, also had escaped. Thayer could not be found in the prison and a coat identified as his was discovered near the farmhouse. Bloodhounds were dispatched in an attempt to pick up his trail.

Warden Is Abducted

The convicts abducted Warden White from his office Friday morning at the point of guns and escaped through the prison gate. They terrorized the countryside west of here, and took several other hostages in their flight.

Officers and soldiers from Fort Leavenworth joined prison guards, sheriff's officers, policemen and armed citizens in running down the fugitives.

Besieged In Farmhouse

The slain men died in the farmhouse of E. C. Salsbury, 73, eight miles west of Leavenworth, while besieged by a posse which poured gunfire and tear gas bombs into their place of refuge.

Officers were uncertain whether the men killed themselves on seeing that capture was inevitable, or were wounded fatally from shots from the outside.

EUGENIE HATS ARE NOW PASSE

New Styles Follow Lines, But Without Hanging Plumes.

By Diana Merwin

Paris (AP).—The Airplane Age hat has come flying into the style picture to take the place of the fast waning plume-decked Empress Eugenie vogue.

The slant silhouette, the tipsy tilt and the romantic role still are a part of the mode, but the new hat eschews all frilly romantics.

Sweeping plumes are becoming passe. The widespread popularity of the plume-decked hat, launched during the Grand Racing week at Longchamps, has been responsible for its demise, stylists say.

Ostrich feathers began to sell for "two ninety eight" and less, they point out; the cook wore crimson and purple plumes on her street clothes—and chic women turned their backs. At recent racing meets here scarcely a plume has been seen.

Modistes answered the demand for a new hat to wear with "old-fashioned modern" clothes by pruning the froth from chapeaux as dressmakers clipped exaggerated bustles from the 1931 version of the 1860 mode to make it fit roadsters and airplanes.

The Airplane Age hat, clean cut in line as a racer, is tiny; it dips over one eye and rolls away from the other, as did the plume decked hat. But its trimming is scant, and its chic depends on its line—clear-cut in reality, but soft in effect.

A patch of fur, a velvet bow, a feather raking skyward—these are the tricks which trim the new chapeau.

The beret is back, although it differs widely from last year's version. It is poised on one side of the head, pulled forward over one eye and cheek, like the Scotch tam-o'-shanter, and topped by an erect little feather.

The gramophone disk hat is another novelty. It is a flat black velvet cap worn on the extreme right side of the head and trimmed with flat loops of velvet ribbon on the other.

The felt hat with flat crown and brim dipping front and back, the felt turned sharply up on one side and down on the other and the velvet chapeau with more softly rolling brim are heavy favorites.

The new beret is among the smartest for sports, felt hats lead the street mode and velvets crown the formal afternoon ensemble.

Japanese Cabinet Is Forced To Quit One Party Favors Suspension Of Gold Standard In Far East Empire.

Tokio, Dec. 12 (AP)—Premier Reijiro Wakatsuki's cabinet turned in its resignation Friday in the face of internal criticism against its foreign and financial policies.

Leaders of the Minseitō (government) and Seiyukai (opposition) parties went into conference at once to formulate a new ministry and the present government will continue until they reach an agreement.

The possibility that Japan might suspend the gold standard and levy restrictions on the exportation of gold was foreseen in authoritative quarters as one result of the turnover. Specie shipments to the United States since October have totaled 304,000,000 yen ($152,000,000) and alarm has been felt for the currency structure.

The Seiyukai party has pledged itself to abandon the gold standard if it comes to power, expressing concern over the continued outflow of the metal. It also favors a more rigorous policy in Manchuria, although that problem is sidetracked for the present by acceptance of the league's peace proposal.

Three possible solutions in forming a new government were foreseen—reappointment of Premier Wakatsuki with a fresh list of ministers from the Minseitō party; a wholly Seiyukai ministry under the probable leadership of former Premier Korekiyo Takasashi; a coalition cabinet of both parties, with Home Minister Kenzo Adachi, storm center of the dissension.

If Premier Wakatsuki again is called to the helm, it was predicted, he would retain Foreign Minister Shidehara and Finance Minister Inouye, both of whose official acts have been under fire. Inouye favors retention of the gold standard and opposes a gold embargo.

WEIGHT OF RAIN GREAT Cloudbursts Caused By Rapidly Rising Warm Air Currents. How heavy is a heavy rain? Though more than half the rain-falls do not exceed five hundredths of an inch, and a half an inch of rain is considered heavy, falls of one inch in a day are common. A 46-inch rain falling during 24 hours at Haecuo in the Philippines, July 14-15, 1911, holds the record for heavy rainfall. It is common to describe hard rains as "heavy" but few people are referring to the actual weight of the water. Yet an inch of rain pours down 113 tons on an acre of ground. If one considers the immense force of the waters down suddenly in cloudbursts and stalled thunderstorms, the destruction sometimes caused by floods from heavy rains, sweeping through city streets or down steep watersheds, is easily understood. Rain Formed The power of the sun's heat ordinarily holds this vast weight of water in suspension, until rising warm air is cooled by expansion or cool winds, causing the vapor to condense. Rain is made by this cooling process, overhead of where it falls. It does not travel ready-made from the ocean, as is commonly supposed. In fact, millions of the tiny particles of moisture which are borne by the air in a rain cloud may be contained in a single drop of rain. Large drops are caused by the fast raising of warm air from the earth in convection currents, which do not allow the tiny droplets to fall but toss them aloft until they collect more moisture and sufficient weight to bear them earthward. Cloudburst The extreme of this process is the western cloudburst, which is caused by the maximum of convection. Uprising air currents hold the rapidly forming raindrops, until a great deal of water accumulates. When it finally falls, the sudden rush of the water is often destructive in its force.

SUNSET PASS

by Zane Grey

SYNOPSIS: A beautiful girl and a mystery at Sunset Pass have drawn Trueman Rock there, under the pretext of looking for work. Rock fell in love with Thiry Preston when he first met her, and his intention now is to find some excuse to stay near her. Trouble threatens him in two directions. Ash Preston, Thiry's brother, has the reputation of a killer and resents any attention that is paid to Thiry. When Rock arrives at Sunset Pass, Ash warns him that he would better leave. There are also mysterious rumors that Gage Preston, Ash's father and the head of the outfit, is mixed up in cattle rustling. Rock was forced to leave Wagontongue six years before because of a gun fight, and he does not want to get in trouble now. But the mystery excites him, and he is determined to help Thiry. Gage Preston offers Rock a job.

Chapter 14

THIRY'S ACCUSATION

Mrs. Preston appeared a worthy mate for this virile cattleman. "Ma, this is Trueman Rock, who's come to ride for me," announced Preston. Then he presented Rock to Alice, a girl of sixteen. She was shy, but curious and friendly. Rock took instantly to the barefooted, big-eyed children, Lucy and Burr. "Where's Thiry?" asked the rancher. "She's ironin', Dad," replied Alice. "Wal, didn't she hear me call?" "Reckon she did, Pa, for you'd 'most woke the daid," replied his wife, and going to the door of the second cabin she called, "Thiry, we've company, an' Pa wants you." Rock caught a low protesting voice that came from inside. "Nonsense, daughter," replied the mother. "You don't look so awful. Anyway, you can't get out of it." Whereupon Thiry appeared in the door in a long blue apron that scarcely hid her graceful symmetry. Her sleeves were rolled up to the elbow of shapely arms. She came

But you're shore welcome to the eyes of wonder and reproach, almost resentment. She accused him, she blamed him for coming. He had brought her more trouble. Rock was so roused that he forgot himself and returned her look with all the amaze and entreaty he felt. "Come, Rock, let me show you the ranch," called Preston. "We're shore some proud of it." "You ought to be. I've seen a sight of ranches, but this one is the finest," returned Rock. "Wal, we throwed up a big cabin," Preston said, "an' we all lived in it for a while. Next I tore the cabin down an' built the double one, an' this one hyar, which Ash has to himself. He won't sleep with nobody." (Copyright, Zane Grey)

Rock learns more about Preston's business on Monday, but he finds a new puzzle.

New Books

By Ware Torrey

New York. — Margaret Ayer Barnes, author of last year's Pulitzer prize novel, "Years of Grace," chooses a challengingly strong situation for the core of her latest book. In "Westward Passage" Mrs. Barnes strips down her story to the seven days in Olivia Ottendorf's life when her past rises up against her present. Olivia, at 39, is on her way back on an ocean liner to America and to Harry—the dull and kindly husband of her second marriage. Suddenly she is faced with Nick Allen, whom she divorced 10 years before. Nick offers Olivia all the romance that her life with Harry lacks, a romance that is the deeper for their former love. There is a younger Olivia to be considered, Nick's own daughter, and two boys who are Harry's children. Through the complications of the voyage and the return home, Olivia weaves her way to a decision between the two men. Mrs. Barnes sustains a brightly entertaining tempo. Her conversation is clever and her action smooth. The plot is clearly worked out, with care in the turning of the problems involved. "Can Europe Keep the Peace?"

"It must accept some provisional system of order," he says, "or the complete disintegration of what contemporary mankind counts civilization is inevitable." This week brings a sequence of lighter studies of people—now and yesterday. "Only Yesterday," Frederick Lewis Allen calls his book on American life through the 1920's. And the time we can look back at over our shoulders becomes history. "Bringing Back The Past" With lavish illustrations, Russell Crouse has put together "an album of dust-covered ladies and gentlemen with a few sprigs of rosemary for their remembrance." "It Seems Like Yesterday" he has called his panorama of the nineties and the nineteen hundreds. His topics cover such famous institutions as the bicyclist, the bartender and the staid door Johnny. Other books range from a sober and thorough account of Wellington, by Philip Guedalla, to Margaret Bourke-White's excellent collection of photographs and comment, "Eyes on Russia," and on to "The Works of John Held, Jr."

FRENCH SALMON FISHING POPULAR WITH AMERICANS

Brioude, France (AP)—Silver-sided salmon in the glacial waters of the Allier here are proving a greater attraction for many Americans than visits to the Louvre museum.

Fishermen hail this town as a dry fly caster's paradise and claim the 16 or 18-pound fish taken are the equal of any in Canada, Norway or Scotland.

The record fish, so far, was caught by Andrew Graves, American resident of Paris, and tipped the scales at 35 pounds.

PIRATES' NEW PILOT FORMER FAMED CATCHER

His Record Of 150 Games Caught In 1909 Still Stands.

New York (AP)—The days when George Gibson, new manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates, ambled out to the box and told a pitcher what to do with the next ball have long since past, but he should be able to give a perplexed hurler some valuable tips in the shadows of the dugout.

A couple of decades ago, Gibson, who recently signed a one year contract with the club, was recognized as the peer of the National league receivers. No matter who the party of the first part was in the Pirates' battery, Gibson almost invariably was named as that of the second part.

In 1909 Gibson caught 150 games, a record which still stands for the National league, and which has been surpassed in the majors only by Ray Schalk who appeared in 151 games for the Chicago White Sox in 1920.

The year before Gibson hung up his huge total he worked in 140 games, and the year afterwards in 143. For six seasons he caught more than 100 games.

The Pirates won the National league pennant in 1909, and Gibson rounded out his great year of catching in the world's series with the Detroit Tigers. Gibson's handling of the pitchers, particularly of Babe Adams who turned in three

Just ONE Question..

"HOW GOOD ARE THEY?"—THAT'S WHAT SMOKERS WANT TO KNOW ABOUT CIGARETTES

SMOKERS, nowadays, aren't taking things for granted. They're shopping around... asking questions.

Old man habit has been discarded... forgotten. "How good is it?"... that's what they want to know about any cigarette they smoke.

"HOW good is it?" Brother, you put your finger right on it!

You want a cigarette that's milder. You want a cigarette that tastes better. You want a pure cigarette. And above all, you want cigarettes that satisfy.

Now when you say that, you're talking Chesterfield's language—none other!

IT STARTS with fine tobacco. Chesterfield buyers are experts in the art of judging quality leaf. They can spot the finest tobacco in any country... and they won't take anything else.

You'll find the same painstaking care... the same skillful handling... in the curing, the blending, and the cross-blending.

Blended and cross-blended... that's Chesterfield! And what a difference it makes in the way it smokes and tastes!

FROM field to package, Chesterfields are protected by the strictest purity standards; the most modern sanitary manufacturing methods.

They're rolled in the finest, whitest paper... that burns without taste or odor. Wrapped in a clean, attractive package... neat, fresh-looking; moisture-tight... but easy to open.

And delivered as fast as they're made... from 3 big factories... to every cigarette counter in the land.

THAT'S the story of why Chesterfields satisfy. That's the reason they're milder... that's why they taste better. Light up... and answer your own question!

Surgeon Aids Eight Children:
Thirty-seven crippled and deformed children ranging in age from a tiny babe in the arms of its mother to a youth in his teens awaited the arrival of Dr. J. Torrence Hugh, orthopedic specialist of Philadelphia, who arrived at the Warner hospital at 7:30 o'clock Wednesday to hold a two-day clinic for deformed children, under the Home Service Branch of the Adams County Red Cross.

Only six of the eight children operated on remained at the hospital to receive the necessary treatment. The parents of the others objected and the children were removed.

Those who remained were Anna Deardorff, Joseph Hess, Gettysburg; John P. Millhous, Bonneauville; Margie Chronister, York Springs; Esther Slaybaugh, East Berlin, and Loretta Reinecker, Harrisburg.

Faber, Chambersburg street, and Miss Zita Alberta Kramar, daughter of Mrs. Emily Ramer, Baltimore street, were married in the parsonage of the Sacred Heart church there by the Rev. Father W. E. Martin, an uncle of the bride, at high noon.

Accompanying them were Grace Ramer, a sister of the bride, who acted as maid of honor, and Charles J. Myers, Chambersburg street, who served as best man.

The bridegroom recently took over the management of the cigar factory and tobacco store in Center Square formerly owned and operated by his father. Mr. Faber is a graduate of the High School and college, graduating in the class of 1917. He is a member of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity.

The bride is a graduate of the parochial schools here. After a honeymoon in Baltimore, Washington and Philadelphia, Mr. and Mrs. Faber will make their home in newly-furnished apartments in the McKnight building, Center Square.

My times are in thy hand: deliver me from the hand of mine enemies, and from them that persecute me. Make thy face to shine upon thy servant: save me for thy mercies sake.

Let me not be ashamed, O Lord; for I have called upon thee: let the wicked be ashamed, and let them be silent in the grave.

Let the lying lips be put to silence; which speak grievous things proudly and contemptuously against the righteous.

Oh how great is thy goodness, which thou hast laid up for them that fear thee: which thou hast wrought for them that trust in thee before the sons of men.

Thou shalt hide them in the secret of thy presence from the pride of man: thou shalt keep them secretly in a pavilion from the strife of tongues.

Blessed be the Lord: for he hath shewed me his marvelous kindness in a strong city. For I said in my haste, I am cut off from before thine eyes: nevertheless thou hearest the voice of my supplications when I cried unto thee.

O love the Lord, all ye his saints: for the Lord preserveth the faithful, and plentifully rewardeth the proud doer.

Be of good courage, and he shall strengthen your heart, all ye that hope in the Lord. Psalm 31:15-24.

his business to C. W. Cook, of New Oxford.

Mr. Cook is a native of Adams county. He began his many years of experience in the merchandising business as clerk in the store of Sheely Brothers, New Oxford. For the past twenty years he has been clerk and manager in the large general store of the Bethlehem Steel corporation at Sparrow's Point, Maryland. The business will be continued under its trade name, Funkhouser's.

Mr. Funkhouser has made no definite plans for the future. He will retain ownership of the Masonic building. Mr. Funkhouser has been identified with many civic improvements since he came to Gettysburg. He served as first president of the Chamber of Commerce. He is now a member of the Borough council.

HISTORY OF ADAMS COUNTY

A Chronological Review Of Things That Have Gone Before, And The Trials And Tribulations Of Our Ancestors, As Published Serially For The Benefit Of Gettysburg Times' Readers.

Lee's Army
"Lee's forces, during June, were increased by the return of a certain number of sick, and those who had been wounded at Chancellorsville, by the arrival of recruits, the result of the conscription law, and by the addition of four brigades—two of infantry under Pettigrew and Davis, one of cavalry under Jenkins, and one of mixed troops under Imboden. The first was nearly 4,000 strong, that of Davis consisting of four regiments, which were not borne on the returns of May 31, although two of them had formerly belonged to the enemy, numbering about 2,200 men; the other two contained each about the same effective force. The increase of artillery amounted to fifteen batteries, comprising sixty-two pieces of cannon and about 800 men. On the other hand this effective force was diminished, first, by the absence of Arn's brigade of Pickett's division, and one regiment of Pettigrew's brigade left at Hanover Junction, and three regiments of Early's division left at Winchester—say about 3,500 men; then by the loss sustained in the battles of Fleetwood, Winchester and Aldie, amounting to 1,400 men; finally, by the admission to the hospitals of men unable to bear the fatigue of the long marches which the army had to make, and the absence of those who, voluntarily or otherwise, remained behind during these marches.

"It is difficult to reckon precisely number of the disabled, of stragglers and of deserters that the army had lost during the month of June. Private information and the comparison of some figures lead us to believe that it was not very large, and did not exceed 5 per cent of the effective force of the army—say 3,750 men in all. We can, therefore, estimate the diminution of the army at about 3,700 men on the one hand, and its increase, on the other hand, by the addition of three brigades and some artillery, at 7,000. We believe that the difference of 1,700 between these two figures must be lessened at least from 1,000 to 1,200 by the return of the sick and wounded and the arrival of a number of conscripts; that, consequently, the Army of northern Virginia arrived on the battlefield of Gettysburg with about 5,000 combatants more than it had on the 31st of May, 1863—that is to say, in the neighborhood of 80,000 men. As we have done in regard to the federal army, in order to find out the amount of the force really assembled on the battlefield, we will deduct the number of mounted men, which was increased by Jenkins' and Imboden's forces, and reduced in the same proportion, making about 12,000 men; and we may conclude that, during the first three days of July, 1863, Lee brought from 68,000 to 69,000 men and 250 guns against the 82,000 or 84,000 unionists with 300 guns collected on this battlefield. Meade had, therefore, from 14,000 to 15,000 men more than his adversary, a superiority which, unfortunately for him, he was unable to turn to advantage.

Total Losses
"The losses on both sides were nearly equal, and enormous for the number of combatants engaged, for they amounted to 27 per cent on the side of the federals, and more than 36 per cent for the confederates. Upon this point, also, the official salt. Cut in fat with knife. Mixing with knife add milk. When soft dough forms pat it out on floured paper until 2/3 inch thick. Place in a greased pan. Spread with apple mixture.
3 cups sliced apples; ¼ cup water; 2/3 cup sugar; 1 teaspoon cinnamon; ¼ teaspoon cloves; 3 tablespoons butter.
Mix apples and water. Cover and cook 5 minutes. Add rest of ingredients. Mix well and pour over dough. Bake 20 minutes in moderate oven. Serve warm.

About New York

By William Gaines
New York—Silly as it seems, it's true:
One of the leading citizens of a town in the chile can carne belt signed up for a fat life insurance policy. He told the local agent to record his business as a "chile powder maker."
When all of the dotted lines were filled in, the papers were sent to the insurance company's headquarters office here. It is one of the biggest of such outfits.
Imagine the amazement of the agent, and the applicant, when word came from the New York office that the application was turned down.
Cause: Chile powder making was considered to mean the manufacture of an explosive, and the insurance risk was too great!
With a little further explaining, the policy was approved.
Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland, who has paid this city several visits recently, has been called an aristocrat on more than one occasion.
But at that, he does not set himself up as such an "untouchable" as some of the "people's choices" who have risen to a comparatively high estate.
When you 'phone his hotel room, naturally you expect a fourth or fifth assistant secretary to answer. It takes your breath away to hear a resonant voice say, "This is Governor Ritchie."

TOOLS OF THE TRADE
To the somewhat bewildered eye of the lay persons the physician's instrument case is a veritable chest of wonders.
The shining collection appears to be composed of many odd and curious devices, terribly complicated and strange.
In the main, however, medical tools, the essential ones, are simple.
A pertinent illustration is the little round laryngeal mirror, commonly seen in the hands of the dentist.
He uses it to see the tongue side of teeth, and to observe the back teeth.
The physician, however, uses it to see "around the corner" of the tongue, to observe the epiglottis, the covering of the voice box, the larynx (voice box), the vocal cords, and the upper portion of the wind pipe.
The discovery of the use of the laryngoscope, as the mirror is called, is credited, not to a physician but to a Spanish music teacher, Senor Manuel Garcia.
He, like many other music teachers, was interested in observing the voice box of a singing person.
He secured a dentist's small mirror, placed it in his own throat, and by the use of a hand mirror reflected the light so that his own throat structures became visible.
A few years later a Hungarian physician invented a small concave mirror, with a hole in its middle, to take the place of the hand mirror used by Senor Garcia.
This mirror could, by means of a projection, be held between the teeth, thus liberating one of the physician's hands.
Light is reflected from this mirror to the one held in the throat, and the physician makes his observation through the hole in the center.

TODAY'S TALK
By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE GIVER

ALL through life a strain of hunger flows. Bodies hunger. Hearts hunger. People's spirits hunger and thirst.
We work that this body may not hunger. We love that this heart may not hunger. But when we give of our abundance, we are thrice fed—and more. Into the great stream of life-hunger goes what we give.
There is no happier person than the one who gives of his substance to feed the hunger of this world.
The artist, the writer, the scientist, the musician, lives the giver life, as none other does, for each radiates his gift, even as it enriches and enlarges his own life.
The other evening I listened to the divine voice of Louise Homer. To my notion, Madame Homer is one of the great women of the world. A great human being, a great mother and a great singer. When you listen to her voice you feel beauty and happiness flowing like strains of gold through every note. And every listener's life is quickened and enriched. You feel the giver.
Every one of us craves happiness in some form or other. But we forget, all too many times, that we hold the key to this happiness in our opportunity to give of all that we have—be that storehouse of ours small or great.
In a way, the Christmas season is meshed with a note of sadness for me because, at this time, there are so many who want to, and do, give beyond their means in intrinsic giving. The spirit of this glad time is lost to so many. The simplest gifts mean most—always. Remembrance alone embraces all! But the entire world is beautified anew because of this season of urge to give.
In every country, day in and day out, noble physicians are giving of their time and skill in hospitals—asking nothing in return beyond the happy privilege of giving, and nurses are administering in the same manner. Whenever I think of nurses I think of many Sisters I have known, whose unselfish and beautiful lives explain God to me.
He always gives most who gives of himself, for without this, as Lowell so beautifully puts it, "the gift, without the giver—is bare."

when the Indiana football team plays on a local gridiron.

Even when their rivals happen to be next door neighbors from West Point, the jumble of individual yells for the "Irish" carries farther on the wind than the best organized cheering of the cadets.

You've heard all about the large Irish element of our city, so you can understand why it is natural for Schwartz, Jskwich, Melnikovich, Sheeketski and Wunsuch to be so popular here.

But what about the Army's Kopcsak, Suarez, Jablonsky and Lanekau? Surely they aren't Orange-men.

Down, But Not Out
Fallen figures of the mighty are indeed pathetic spectacles. Especially when they cling to the postures of prouder days.

There is a ludicrous element in such situations, however, which satire feeds upon. And this element has seldom been more eloquently exemplified than in a giant statue of Father Neptune, left reclining on its back in Prospect park.

His majestic image sprawls, inert against his massive but ineffectual biceps, his haughty head upraised as a sick man tries to leave his bed.

It seems the statue was delivered before other figures were available to be assembled about him on a fountain. So he must rest on the cold, wet ground until workers come to hoist him to his pedestal.

But stay! Maybe we wrong the sire of waters to sneer at pride in so awkward a position. Is he not a model of behavior at a time when so many favored of the gods are on their backs?

"You can't keep a good man down" might be a fitting inscription to place at Neptune's feet.

PERVERSE HUMAN NATURE
Man is an animal perverse
When work is plenty, work's a curse
And roused to toil at break of day
In bed he thinks it's sweet to stay,
But when by fate compelled to shirk
He grieves because he cannot work.

Man bound by duties swears that he
Much rather would be an idler be,
He thinks it cruel and unjust,
While others play that work he must,
But take his tasks from him away.

So strange is life, so strange is man,
He yearns to rest who seldom can.
He frets at toil when he is tasked,
But given the long vacation asked,
Ere long among his fellowmen
He yearns to be at work again.

SUNDOWN STORIES

BIG RED HOUSE

By Mary Graham Bonner
"We must hurry," the Little Black Clock exclaimed, as the children met him.
"You're going to turn the time ahead?" John asked.
"I can't be sure," said Peggy, "when you don't say, 'Hurry, hurry, hurry!'"
"I'm going to turn it back to yesterday afternoon," said the Little Black Clock, "but we're going to see some one who is very busy."

"Are we going to see, Santa Claus?" Peggy shouted.
"Right up North?" asked John.
"That's where we're going," the Little Black Clock said.

They went down to the magic path and took the first turn. There, they found a big wide sleigh ready for them. Two reindeer were ready to pull it along.

There had been no snow in the garden they had left, but here the ground was covered with snow.

As soon as the Little Black Clock had led John take the reins, they were off.

How the reindeer could dash across the snow! They fairly seemed to fly past towns and across long distances over the open country.

At last they saw before them a long, low, enormous red house, and beyond it another red house which John and Peggy knew was the adjoining pantry where Santa kept the oranges and nuts and rosy cheeked apples which he put in stockings on Christmas Eve.

Santa heard the sleigh approaching, and now he came outside the door.

His eyes were dancing and twinkling with merriment, and he shouted out in his merry voice:
"Welcome to Santa's red house."

HUNGER MARCHER FORCED TO "WALK"

Chambersburg—Dressed in a well-worn coat and not so heavily shod, Joe Malanbich, 55, auto mechanic, erstwhile member of the "National Hunger Army" that staged a demonstration in Washington, arrived in Chambersburg Wednesday.

Joe was carrying the blanket that he had used for cover en route to Washington in a motor truck. He was left stranded in the capital when some of the drivers of trucks that had transported the "army" left upon being paid off. Tuesday night, Joe said, he walked here from Hagerstown. Wednesday morning he made 50 cents here shoveling snow. That amount represented his entire capital.

FREDERICK BUSINESS MAN DIES SUDDENLY

Frederick—Charles Newton Wachter, Frederick business man, died at his home about 3:30 o'clock Thursday morning of angina pectoris. He had been ill for only two days and news of his death came as a shock to his friends, some of whom were not even aware he had been ill. He was 48 years of age, and lived his entire life in this city, and from early manhood had been identified with business interests here.

On Tuesday last Mr. Wachter left Frederick by auto to take his daughter, Miss Mary Caroline Wachter, to Damascus, where she is a teacher in the high school.

M. O. LEWIS LOSES HIS OFFICE IN YORK

York—The office of superintendent of buildings and grounds was discontinued and the holder of the position, M. O. Lewis, dismissed at Thursday night's meeting of the board of school directors.

Mr. Lewis has held the position for approximately eighteen years. The salary had been fixed at $4,000 when he was re-appointed several years ago, but it was considerably less than that when he first entered upon the duties of the office. The salary was advanced from time to time with the growth of the school district.

M. O. Lewis, whose dismissal was ordered by five members of the board, is a brother of Samuel S. Lewis, secretary of the state highway department, republican leader of York county.

BREAKS LEG AT FIRE; RODE DEER UNHARMED

Stewartstown—The case of the chap who traveled all over the world, through the midst of peril, only to meet death by slipping while climbing from his bathtub has almost been paralleled by the York county treasurer, Dr. Evans M. Free, of this place, although fortunately the consequences to Doctor Free were not as serious as to the first named person. Last week, while the local physician was on a trip to Clinton county hunting deer, he was thrown from the back of a 200-pound buck, which he had thought dead, onto a stony patch of ground without doing more than receiving some bruises. Wednesday morning, while he was hurrying to the barn to climb into his automobile to go to visit a patient, he slipped on the icy walk and sustained a fracture of one of the bones of his lower right leg, near the ankle.

JURY AWARDS 2 MEN LAND IN FRANKLIN CO.

Chambersburg—The jury in the George and John Dory—John S. Arnold case Wednesday morning returned a verdict for the plaintiffs by which the Dorys were awarded the acre and a half of Peters township land that constituted the basis of the suit.

Both parties claimed title to the land under provisions of deeds issued for larger tracts to both the Dorys and Arnold by the latter's mother. The Dorys live in Peters township and Arnold lives in Mercersburg.

JURY FINDS POWERS GUILTY

Convicted Of Taking Life Of Mrs. Lemke; Shows No Emotion.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Dec. 12 (AP)—Harry F. Powers, lothario of the West Virginia hills, was convicted Thursday of murder in the first degree for the "matrimonial racket" slaying of Mrs. Dorothy Pressler Lemke, Northboro, Massachusetts, divorcee.

The verdict carries a mandatory sentence of hanging.

It took one hour and fifty minutes for the twelve farmers and small town business men to decide that the man who wooed dozens of women by mail should go to the gallows for the first of the five killings he is accused of perpetrating in the subterranean death chamber of his windowless, sound-proof garage at a place paradoxically called Quiet Dell.

J. Ed. Law, defense counsel, made a motion to have the verdict set aside. Arrangements for a new trial will be heard Saturday.

The jury deliberated in a dressing room in the basement of the town opera house, where the trial was held in order to accommodate the hundreds of townspeople who for months had been singing songs, reading books and playing phonograph records about the "bluebeard slaying at Quiet Dell."

Above the jury, in the center of a brilliantly-lighted stage, sat the man whose doom they were sealing.

If Powers had any but a passing concern in what was being decided downstairs, he hid it perfectly.

His attorney, who had wept and clutched a table to support himself as he begged the jurors for "cercy-sympathy," was the only one on the stage who displayed any concern.

ACTRESS SAVED FROM DEATH AS COSTUME CATCHES FIRE

Audience Unaware Girl's Dash Across Stage Was Impromptu

New York, Dec. 12—Kay Barry, 24, principal in a burlesque show in the Gotham theatre, was seriously burned about the arms, face and back Thursday when sparks from a short circuit ignited her flimsy costume behind the scenes during a performance. She was taken to Harlem hospital.

The girl was waiting for a cue to go on the stage when an electrician apparently blew out a fuse in the wall against which she was leaning. Instantly her clothing burst into flames and she rushed on the stage, crying, "Please help me."

The audience evidently thought the scene was part of the show and broke into applause. Fred Kiel, a stage hand, grabbed Miss Barry, dragged her back into the wings and beat out the fire with his hands, sustaining burns which required treatment at the hospital. The act continued without interruption and few in the audience knew the affair was not part of the performance.

Heads of Two Trusts Face Trial for Shipping Produce in Torn Bags.

Moscow, Dec. 12—(AP)—Two directors of Soviet trusts were expelled from the communist party and cited for criminal trial Thursday for shipping produce stuffed in torn bags instead of properly packed in wooden boxes.

A. A. Barinov, commercial director of the Textile Trust, and N. L. Pertsoff, director of the Moscow Confectionary Trust, were summarily dealt with for their handling of tea cakes and handkerchiefs. A number of others were cited for trial.

Nine departments connected with the system of supply for manufactured goods were involved in charges of sending great amounts of commodities to storage instead of distributing them for public consumption.

The Chicago social service worker arrived Wednesday morning and entered the hospital for observation and possibly an operation. Wednesday night word was brought to her of her selection to share in the peace award.

Sun Bathers Are Irate At Dirigible

Complain Passengers On Airship Spy On Them From Air; Pilot Denies Charge.

St. Petersburg, Fla., Dec. 12 (AP)—The annual dispute between aeronauts and nude sun bathers here is on again.

Complaints were filed with city officials Friday, demanding that operators of the dirigible Reliance be prohibited from flying over the municipal solarium. The petitions claimed the sun bathers were exposed to the gaze of the dirigible's passengers.

Pilot S. H. Sheppherd denied he made a practice of deliberately flying over the solarium. He said passengers usually make a specific request to be taken over the recreation pier, which is near the solarium. Besides, he said, the ship flies so high sun bathers cannot be discerned from the wooden benches on which they lie. Police Chief R. H. Noel made a flight with him Friday and concurred in that assertion.

The city attorney said there was no law against an airship's pilot flying anywhere the pilot pleased over St. Petersburg and no violation of department of commerce regulations was found. The same complaints have been made in other years, but not so vigorously.

The Reliance is using this city as its operating base this winter.

GOVERNMENT AUTO REFUSED BY GARNER

New Speaker Says He Believes In Setting Example In Economy.

Washington, Dec. 12 (AP)—Speaker Garner Friday decided to forego the special automobile that goes along with the speakership. Many a quip he and the late Speaker Longworth exchanged in past sessions over "our car," as Garner called the machine.

As minority leader, he often told his friend Longworth the car, bought by the government for the speaker's use, some day would be his to use by a democratic overturn of the republican majority.

"Mrs. Garner and I don't need the automobile in the first place, and I believe in setting an example in government economy," the speaker said.

Washington Highlights

By Herbert Plummer

Washington—The example set by the late Dwight Morrow of New Jersey when he entered the United States senate probably will be followed very little by the new "crop" of senators who are now making their debut on the hill.

Morrow didn't speak in the senate except to vote and answer present the whole time he served. Several times it was rumored he might make a speech, but he never did.

There are 17 in the "freshman class" of the present congress. It's a pretty safe bet that before long most of them will have sounded off in one way or another.

Three of the group may be a bit reluctant or slow in starting. But the other 14—all of whom are lawyers—may be expected to get underway at about the first opportunity.

Barbour of New Jersey, a thread manufacturer; Coolidge of Massachusetts, who makes machinery; and Mrs. Hattie Caraway of Arkansas, who succeeds her husband, are the three expected to be among the least loquacious.

To Hear From Lewis
J. Hamilton Lewis, the colorful senator from Illinois, doubtless will get into action quickly. His deep, resonant voice is capable of charming nearly any audience.

"Jim Ham" already has indicated that he will get off to an early start. Months ago he requested that he be given the space on the senate floor he had when he served before. His reason was that he wanted to feel at home from the start.

Dickinson of Iowa is another. Already he has matched wits with one of the senate's best orators and debaters—Pat Harrison of Mississippi—in an open debate on the tariff and probably feels that he has been baptized sufficiently.

Then, too, his years of service in the house probably make him feel confident to speak his mind at any time.

Hull of Tennessee, White of Maine—both veterans of the house—doubtless feel the same way.

Bulow of South Dakota, who comes to Washington widely heralded for his dry humor and ability to wisecrack, is another of the incoming group expected to be heard from soon.

ing up when something annoys him. True, the evidence thus far has been confined to his complaint that cranes in the Washington zoo made so much noise that he couldn't sleep, but that may give an insight to the man.

There'll be worse things than cranes to disturb the senator's peace of mind in the days ahead.

The first and only low-priced car with

Syncro-Mesh Shift and Free Wheeling

ONE of the biggest driving thrills in modern motoring is now available at one of the lowest prices in the automobile market. Syncro-Mesh is combined with Free Wheeling in the new Chevrolet Six!

This is the first time that these two outstanding inventions have been brought together in a low-priced automobile. Syncro-Mesh is the most advanced type of transmission ever developed. Free Wheeling is that new sensation which adds so much to the zest of driving. The two make a matchless combination! They bring about an entirely new kind of driving ease and car control, far beyond anything you have ever enjoyed. They give you quick, quiet shifting and complete mastery of the car under all driving conditions. They enable you to do things in driving that are impossible without both these features.

If you prefer to drive in "standard" gear, Syncro-Mesh enables you to shift back and forth with uncanny speed, silence and precision. This is particularly desirable when descending steep hills or traveling slippery streets. For it enables you to use the engine as a brake, instantly, without slowing down the car.

Then, suppose you want Free Wheeling. Simply press a button on the dash. Thereafter, and until you pull the button out again, you Free Wheel. You coast along with a delightful gliding sensation. And you shift with never-to-be-forgotten ease.

The Free Wheeling mechanism of the new Chevrolet Six is a highly simplified type. Instead of a complicated mechanism with many moving parts, it is a simple, sturdy unit, with only three moving parts.

Then, along with Syncro-Mesh and Free Wheeling, Chevrolet offers you 60-horsepower six-cylinder performance, higher speed, faster acceleration, greater smoothness, smarter Fisher bodies, matchless economy, and a first cost that is among the lowest in the market. Certainly it's the great American value for 1932.

The new Chevrolet Six combines the advantages of two inventions . . . Syncro-Mesh and Free Wheeling . . . to assure quick, quiet, easy gear-shifting and positive control of the car under every driving condition

"How," inquires a gent looking for trouble, "would you rank the football teams for 1931 since the Associated Press All-America poll shows a majority of places going to the middle west?"

On the record, prior to the mid-December windups and mindful of the forthcoming Rose Bowl classic, we would put the major outfits in this order:

1. Tulane
2. Southern California
3. St. Mary's
4. Tennessee
5. Northwestern
6. Notre Dame
7. Pittsburgh
8. Georgia
9. Yale
10. Harvard
11. Army
12. Southern Methodist

It seems superfluous to add that the sharpshooters was under way before this list was completed.

It would be safer to bracket Tulane and S. C. together, since they will in due time settle the argument at Pasadena as to the No. 1 ranking position—unless there is a tie. But Tulane, through the regular campaign, has compiled the better record, in fact the best in the country.

There's just as big an argument, if not bigger as to whether St. Mary's should be ranked above or below S. C. St. Mary's beat Southern California, also California, by a wider margin than the Trojans. St. Mary's handed Southern Methodist its first defeat.

The Gaels, however, experienced a two game slump in which they were tossed about by the Olympic Club and U. C. L. A.

As against this, Southern California came on after its first and only setback to whip Notre Dame and bury such good teams as Oregon, Washington, Stanford and Washington State.

And there the debate begins...

Life Of Count Orsi

One of Johnny's old playmates tells us that Johnny (Count) Orsi, captain of the Colgate eleven who was very much in the running for All-America end, started playing football when he was so small that a suit couldn't be found to fit him.

It was back in 1922 when Johnny about 12 years old and a freshman, trotted out on the field to report as a candidate for the team at Columbia high school, South Orange, N. J. He was trailing in the footsteps of his older brother, Tim, a boy who is considerably shorter than the 6 foot 1 inch Johnny now, but then was several inches taller and a great deal heavier.

Oddments & Reminders

"Director Benny Owen of Oklahoma averred he was at work on a static machine that would obliterate broadcast of football games played by his Sooners"—News Item. It might obliterate Benny too.

"Grandi took 3,000 clippings about visit to show Mussolini"—headline. Perhaps he once read Knute Rockne's famous advice to the linemen who was being pushed around.

"Gar Wood to break record or boat"—headline. Or neck.

Branch Rickey doesn't hold any fancy titles, neither does his salary come anywhere near marching those of Commissioner Landis or Babe Ruth, but he has again demonstrated his capacity as one of baseball's most extraordinary executives by leading the minor leagues of the country through a program of almost complete reorganization.

"Doctor" Rickey a long time ago diagnosed baseball's ills, especially as they applied to the minors. With the support of Sam Breadon, president and chief stockholder of the St. Louis Cardinals, he has built up the chain-store business to a profitable basis.

Rickey's methods, it now seems certain, will be widely adopted in the attempt to revive the game's outposts and sources of major league material.

The chain-store system, or whatever it may be called, no longer is under fire. The New York Yankees, in buying the Newark club, have taken a step toward adopting it and it seems certain the support of other major leagues will be extended in the minor league field far beyond anything that has existed before.

Challenge To Twenty Grand

Twenty Grand's rating among the super-horses, for ability to go the route at least, seems assured, but the star of the Greentree Stable had one superior at all-around performance, in the opinion of Marshall Lilley, noted exercise boy and now assistant trainer of the Whitney racing establishment.

"Sysonby," Lilley told the New York Press, "was the best horse I ever had anything to do with, but this Twenty Grand is not far behind him. Sysonby was quicker on the pick up, and had more speed and was better at short distances but I don't believe I ever saw a better distance horse than Twenty Grand. I mean for races at one mile and a half and farther. He seems to get better after he has run for a mile and a furlong or a mile and a quarter."

Twenty Grand, already among the big money winners of all time, probably will return to the races

next year as a four-year-old and make the attempt to surpass Sun Bear's record

Crisler's Record Good

Fritz Crisler won't have to make any apologies, if and when he hands over the responsibility of Minnesota's head football coaching to Bernie Bierman, of Tulane, who formerly were the Gopher colors.

Crisler developed a great attack and pulled Minnesota through to a successful season, climaxed by the victory over Ohio State.

In Manders and Captain Munn, All-America guard, the Gophers furnished two outstanding examples of the power-type of performer associated for so long with their gridiron achievements.

Around New Orleans it is considered a certainty Bierman will yield to the call of his alma mater, despite the unusual success he has gained with Tulane.

Impartial 'Pop'

Pop Warner, asked by Gil Dobie where he would prefer to coach, replied he was impartial, just so long as he could be assured about 30 boys averaging close to 200 pounds, each able to do around 10 seconds for the "100." The climate wouldn't matter so much then.

Hunk Anderson of Notre Dame, asked to pick the best linemen his team faced all season, named Quatse of Pittsburgh, Riley of Northwestern and Baker of Southern California.

But Hunk hastened to add that Army's line was the toughest the Ramblers tried to break through all year. Price and Sommerfelt were particularly troublesome for Notre Dame.

The Cadet announcer in the press box of the Yankee Stadium pretty well epitomized the situation, in the fourth quarter, when he barked: "Schwartz, tackled by the Army line."

The soldier players showed no respect whatever for the famous All-American halfback from Bay St. Louis, down in Mississippi.

Dope Does Tailspin

Anyhow you figure it out, it has been a dizzy gridiron season.

Columbia Walloped Dartmouth and Cornell whipped Columbia, but Dartmouth evened it up by a two-touchdown victory over Cornell.

Notre Dame smeared Pittsburgh, which gave the Army a lacing, but the result was that Army climbed all over Notre Dame's running machinery in the Yankee Stadium.

"You will all be gloomy in another five years at that rate," remarked Gil Dobie to a gathering of fellow coaches, after things like this had been under discussion.

Late Blooming Roses

On the same day that a lot of All-America selections were being hawked around the newspaper premises, a number of young gent in football uniform decided to run wild, including Ray Stecker of the Army, Bob Lossiter of Yale and the Carolina Lassiters, and Ernie Caddell of Stanford.

We searched the All-Americans carefully without finding anything more than an honorable mention for any of these boys.

Perhaps the best solution of this national problem would be to pick an All-America, up to and including a certain date and then select another on the basis of post-season returns, up to and including New Year's Day.

Bucknell's Broadside

Bucknell isn't ready to concede Pittsburg or any other outfit a major share of the assorted eastern football honors without an argument.

The Bisons, although tied three times, wound up their campaign as the only undefeated outfit in these parts and they are ready to defend the distinction, right down to the last yard.

For example, writes Arthur L. Brandon from Lewisburg, the home of the Bisons: "Bucknell played five major eastern foes, Pittsburgh four Pitt's eastern opponents were the Army, Carnegie Tech, West Virginia and Penn State. Among them they won but three games against eastern teams and one of these victories was by the weak West Virginia team over a still weaker Penn State eleven."

"In a 'Mythical League,' Pitt's eastern opponents are grouped in the lost sixth in the standings. In the same 'Mythical League,' Bucknell's opponents are grouped as follows: Fordham and Temple, in the first two-fifths, Georgetown, Villanova and W. & J. in the next two-fifths. Thus, all Bucknell opponents, so far as their 1931 ratings are concerned, rank higher than the four opponents Pitt found little trouble in beating."

AMUSEMENTS

J. Farrell MacDonald, stage and screen veteran who achieved new fame when he played the part of the beloved coach in "The Spirit of Notre Dame" for Universal, renews that accomplishment in a role of similar nature in Paramount's realistic story of football—"Touchdown!" which comes to the Majestic theatre today.

Waterbury, Connecticut, claims MacDonald as her favorite son in the movies. Having left his home in the rock-bound New England town for the greater adventure of a stage life, MacDonald tramped years of ripening experience. He has many stage characterizations to his credit, and a great number of screen impersonations.

TYPHOID CASES SHOW BIG DROP

Figure Higher Than It Should Be For This Time Of Year.

"A sharp drop in cases of typhoid over a four-week period ending November 21 is the most important development in the field of communicable diseases," said Dr. J. Moore Campbell, chief of that bureau of the department of health. The week ending October 24 showed 106 cases, while the week ending November 21 showed only 64 people suffering from the malady.

That figure, however, is higher than it should be for the time of year, which condition may be accounted for by the conditions of the water supply in various parts of the commonwealth. Drought is prevalent this autumn, as it was last year, in many sections and undoubtedly the searching for new sources of supply on the part of those families who depend on wells, springs and smaller streams for drinking water, has resulted in supplies being found that do not measure up to healthy standards of purity.

DUKE IS REFUSED
LICENSE IN N. Y.

Grounds For Divorce Are
Such He Cannot Marry
For Three Years.

New York, Dec. 12 (AP)—The Duke of Manchester was refused a license to marry Miss Kathleen Dawes, formerly a London actress, when he applied Friday at the marriage license bureau in the municipal building.

The Englishman gave the right answers to all of the routine questions of City Clerk Michael J. Guise until the subject of his previous marriage was reached.

A final divorce decree was granted to his first wife, the former Miss Helena Zimmerman, of Cincinnati, while he was en route here, the duke explained, and though he did not have the decree itself he could supply an affidavit that it had been entered.

"On what grounds?" inquired the clerk.

"On statutory grounds for misconduct," was the answer.

The clerk then informed him New York state law required that he wait three years for a license after such a divorce.

"Well, that means waiting some more," the duke said, turning to Miss Dawes.

"Yes," she said, smiling.

It was indicated the duke would await the arrival of the decree and then the ceremony would be performed in a place where further delay would not be necessary.

HITLER KEPT OFF AIR
BY GOVERNMENT EDICT

Nazi Leader Also Prohibited From
Telephoning Speech To London
For Relay To U. S.

Berlin, Dec. 12 (AP)—Adolf Hitler, chief of the Nazis, tried to reach the ear of America Friday night with a broadside against Chancellor Brüning—but the dictatorial arm of the government thrust him aside.

Both Reich and Prussian authorities forbade him to broadcast in Germany and re-broadcast to the United States an 8,000-word address he had drafted in reply to the chancellor's radio speech of several nights ago.

After attempting in vain to telephone the document to London for relay across the Atlantic, Hitler grudgingly submitted it to the official radio censor. It was barred on the grounds that it would violate the "Christmas truce" on political agitation set up by the latest emergency decree.

MAROONS LOSE
OPENER FRIDAY

Scotland Team Holds Local
Five To Four Field Goals
In Game Here.

Held to but four field goals during the entire game, the Gettysburg high school basketball team lost its opening game of the season Friday night on the local floor to the Scotland Industrial school passers, 17-11.

The visitors played a close guarding game and the Maroons found themselves blanked in the first and fourth periods. Gettysburg's offense functioned but one quarter during the game, the Maroons scoring nine of their points in the third period.

Scotland took the lead in the first quarter and never once relinquished it. Heiber dropped a goal through the cords for the first score and this was followed by a shot by Rote.

This completed the scoring for the first period which ended 4-0. Johnny Ridinger scored the first Maroon goal of the year when he tallied early in the second period. Scotland came back strong and Davies, Metague and Ryder swished the cords with shots. At half time the visitors held a commanding 11-2 lead.

Maroons Rally

Coach Martin's lads staged a rally in the third period but found the lead too great to overcome. Rupp cut the cords for a pair of double-deckers and Smith looped one. Smith added a pair of fouls and Trotter contributed a charity throw. Davies and Metague scored to keep Scotland out in front. Neither team could contribute a single point in the final quarter and the game ended 17-11.

While the Maroons gave a rather drab performance, many of the players showed promise and with more practice the locals should develop into a formidable team. The locals missed the services of Bob Shealer, guard, who was forced to remain on the bench owing to scholastic deficiencies.

Scrubs Show Promise

The Maroon and White scrub team lost a heart-breaker in the preliminary game, 16-15 in an extra period. Lacking only height, the Middlets displayed brilliant form that threatened to overthrow the strong Epco passers. Hankey tied the score at 14 all with a goal just before the regular game and then added a foul in the extra period. With but 15 seconds to go, Swisher sank a shot that brought the reserves to their initial defeat.
